LETTER FROM THE DIRECTOR

Dear Members and Supporters of The Newark Museum of Art,

Since the pandemic turned the world upside down, The Newark Museum of Art has focused on rebounding stronger, wiser, and more effectively. Our increased resilience has brought about a year of unprecedented innovation.

Strengthening the Museum's connections in the community, we have created an advisory committee, inspired by new partnerships with local organizations and artists. Our goal was to develop new and engaging programming. We have put into action the ideas recommended by the committee, with great public response, and we will continue to build on these efforts in the new year.

Internally, The Newark Museum of Art has remained committed to being a core education partner to New Jersey and the greater Northeast region. What we are offering is a best-in-class hybrid approach to art, science, and technology education—proving that we are still setting standards for learning that museums across the country are now adopting.

With that same forward thinking mindset, we have renovated our Earth Sciences galleries to present Endangered!, an immersive multi-sensory experience focused on threatened habitats and species and what visitors can do to help. The program was made possible by support from the New Jersey

Department of Community Affairs, The Fannie and Morris Sklaw Foundation, Inc., The Merrill G. and Em-ita E. Hastings Foundation, Eleonore K. Cohen, and generous individual donors in our community.

The Museum has made some bold changes externally as well. Responding to the striking geometries of our historic main entrance, artist Phillip K. Smith III's dramatic Three Half Lozenges now lights up the main windows of our iconic Beaux Arts façade. The first major site-specific installation for this artist on the East Coast, Three Half Lozenges delivers on our strategy to create a truly vibrant cultural district for residents and visitors while helping us to become the destination Museum of our region.

Thinking through a robust racial equity lens, we have shifted our perspective within the Museum and beyond. Our ambitious agenda includes giving a platform to thought leaders from corporations, universities, and environmental and public policy institutes to offer a safe space for difficult but necessary dialog on the challenges facing communities across our country. The Moral Pandemic: A Racial and Gender Equity Summit held in October 2021 was the first of what we hope will be an annual convening to engage a broad national audiences with our timely and constructive panel discussions.

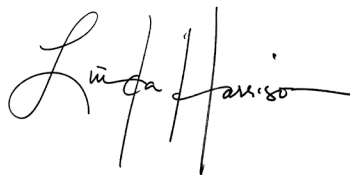

This year on our campus, we have also made incredible progress with an extensive restoration of our beloved Victorian-era Ballantine House, beginning with its aging façade. Over several months, a talented historic preservation team has been replacing every piece of crumbling limestone with more durable and period-appropriate cast stone, protecting the building's historic structure and its precious contents from damage. As we spruce up our street-facing appearance, we will continue with critical conservation planning for its ornate interiors in anticipation of a grand reopening of this national historic landmark in 2023.

Throughout the months of closure, we have also been planning a major enhancement of our grounds with a mixed-use residential/commercial/art/education center that we call Museum Parc. With an anticipated groundbreaking late this year or in early 2023, Museum Parc will create a new space in downtown Newark that will redefine our role locally and nationally as a Museum and a cultural hub.

From redefining the Museum's role in our communities to illuminating the façade of Washington Street in downtown Newark and to developing a new immersive Earth Sciences gallery, this past year has stretched our capabilities in amazing ways.

I am incredibly proud of the work the staff—supported by an engaged Board of Trustees, community partners, our Members, Volunteers, supporters, and our esteemed elected officials—has been able to deliver this past year.

Thank you all for helping us give new meaning to the word “renewal.”

“Being an Explorer is very meaningful to me. As an aspiring artist, I have always felt deeply drawn to museums, especially those that make me feel accepted by giving marginalized people voices and representation. The Newark Museum of Art inspires me to make art which can help another little girl struggling with her identity feel understood and accepted.”

- AREESHA AHMED, EXPLORER, CLASS OF 2021

“The Museum’s youth programs are fun, participatory and educational in the truest sense of the word. Each educator so gracefully affirms joy, mutual discovery and shared knowledge. I wish every child could experience this enlightened pathway.”

2021 IMPACT

The Newark Museum of Art provides access to art and science collections to educate and inspire visitors of all ages. Together we celebrate creativity and unite communities through the exploration of world culture.

This year, as we continue to recover from the impact of COVID-19, New Jersey families have relied upon our high-quality STEM education and the healing power of art to reconnect with each other and ease the return to the classroom. To meet the complex needs of our new online viewers and returning visitors to our galleries, our curators, educators, and creative partners have delivered unique art and science programs that combat learning loss and lingering social isolation.

With the help of our partners and donors, we have delivered a robust hybrid calendar of onsite experiences and virtual programs to build community and open doors to world cultures with our members and new online audiences. Reaching classrooms and living rooms statewide and even internationally, our programs are providing tens of thousands of people new ways to learn and play, reduce stress and find common ground in creativity.

Arts & Culture

Against all odds, our talented curators and artist partners realized seven commissions and exhibitions this season, site-specific exterior light installations, immersive gallery projections, and rotations including contemporary textiles and rare historic artifacts. We exhibited new work from artists working in our city and state and offered a platform to talented leaders working in studios around the globe on projects that build community.

It has been a joy and a solace to see our exhibitions and artist projects drawing members and visitors back into The Newark Museum of Art after our reopening in June. Inspiring new contemporary art is on view in many of our galleries, and our Washington Street entrance has come alive with a new art installation that lights up downtown Newark. This nightly illumination is a gift to our city and a beacon that invites families to enjoy our collections and many free cultural celebrations throughout the year.

Science & Technology

The Museum and its educators delivered more than 100 STEAM-inspired programs on-site and online to connect more young people to today's fastest-growing field. Whether it's the new floor-to-ceiling multisensory experience in the Victoria Hall of Science or the multimedia installation in the Global Contemporary Art gallery, our visitors are able to immerse themselves in new worlds powered by the latest creative technologies.

This year, through dynamic virtual programming, our visitors explored everything from the world's new premier space observatory to the lab of local plant scientists

“The Newark Museum of Art has always been a vital resource for our great city of Newark and our great state of New Jersey, and it is now expanding its role as a civic partner facilitating important conversations and continuing to use the arts to heal and bring communities together.”

studying food scarcity, with quite a few stops in between. Behind the scenes, the Museum's operations team oversaw comprehensive upgrades to servers and systems to safeguard data and communications throughout the Museum. The launch of a digital guide through Bloomberg Connects gave visitors new access to the Museum's collections and activities.

Education

Our unique art and science programs have helped students succeed in the classroom for generations—and this school year is no exception. Driven to meet the needs of families across our state, our educators created new resources and materials to support hybrid learning for tens of thousands of students in pre-K–Grade 12. Among them: popular field trips, summer learning pods, digital tool kits and diversity and inclusion resources mapped to the NJ Board of Education curriculum in art, science, and history. Now more than ever, our collections are a vital resource in supporting the academic journey of New Jersey's youth.

“The NMOA is looking and feeling so contemporary. It's all looking good.”

- MUSEUM MEMBER,
FALL 2021

Collections

With our artist partners, we hosted virtual studio visits, public talks, and gallery tours to connect visitors to the remarkable and inspiring process of art making. Our collections team produced new interactive, 360-degree gallery views to enable visitors to explore our permanent galleries in new ways. Despite the unprecedented logistical challenges, the collections team supported the installation of works on loan to museums across the country and the conservation of work in temporarily closed galleries. The team also continued with the prestigious and rigorous re-accreditation process with the American Alliance of Museums, which certifies the quality and accessibility of collections to the public.

Mentoring

We helped our Class of 2021 Explorers hone their soft skills and distance learning techniques as they prepared for an unprecedented college experience. We provided one-on-one coaching to our senior Class of 2021 and underclassmen Explorers and their families as they navigated college admissions and the testing process this fall. Throughout the year, our teen mentoring services ensured that there was no disruption to the critical work experience and access to field professionals that sets our students apart in the college application process.

National Leadership

This past year presented new opportunities for the Museum to expand its role and to begin using its influence to address long-standing ing societal issues affecting all communities. To start the conversation, this year we hosted Women, Power and Promise, a virtual gathering of incredible leaders in the fields of art, health, law, and government to inspire all women to realize new possibilities for themselves and their colleagues. In October we presented a virtual summit over three evenings to explore racial and gender equity from the inside out. What we witnessed from our presenters, panelists, and guests was an eagerness to learn from each other as well as a willingness to do our part to uplift and empower one another to be the leaders our communities need.

Civic Engagement in Newark

There is no doubt that the pandemic has magnified disparities in access to education and cultural resources. As a museum of the community, we continued to look for new ways to increase our accessibility. Our ongoing policy of free admission for Newark residents impacted thousands of visitors this year alone, enabling Newark's youth, seniors, and families to access free services and programs all year long.

Through our PLACE task force, we worked with grassroots community partners to support mobile pop-up vaccination clinics during the Museum's community day events, an online food drive for Newark pantries, a voting rights initiative with Project Ready, and a holiday toy drive for families through the New Jersey Reentry Program. It is our privilege as an anchor cultural institution in Newark's downtown arts district to actively contribute to the well-being of all Newarkers.

“I always thought the museum was a gem (have visited a few times from Long Island). Gorgeous, pristine displays with interesting signage. Beautifully designed interiors with comfortable enclaves of lovely art. The art of Japan, Korea, India and especially Tibet are great and among the best anywhere. An absolutely wonderful experience overall!”

“This program has taught me a lot about being myself, who I’ve become, and so many more things in life that I know will come in handy in the future. I couldn’t be prouder! I definitely hold myself more accountable for things, making sure that when I put my name on something, I’m proud. Because of the extra classes we attend, I’m just a better person overall.”
